

LODGE ELECTED
TO THE SENATE
BY THREE VOTES

OF DEMOCRATIC MEMBERS OF
MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLA-TURE TODAY.

CONTESTS IN MANY STATES

Other Senators Chosen Today—New York State is Still Deadlocked, Sheehan Losing One Vote.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Boston, Mass., Jan. 18.—Henry Cabot Lodge was reelected United States senator from Massachusetts today at the joint session of the two houses; after one of the hardest fought battles in the history of the state. Three candidates voted for him, giving him the much coveted seat.

Henry Cabot Lodge, United States senator from Massachusetts and one of the notable examples of the American scholar in American politics, was born in Boston, May 12, 1850. When he was graduated from Harvard in 1871 he had just reached his majority.
He early became interested in politics, but it was not until 1879, after a rather long service as editor of the North-American Review, that he plunged into active politics. He attended campus, primary and convention, and was elected to the Massachusetts legislature.
In 1881 he was beaten for state senator. Next year he ran for congress and failed. In 1883 he came to the front and assisted in the defeat of Governor Butler for re-election. This was his first great success. Yet he was defeated, the following election, when he was again a congressional candidate. In 1886 he was elected to congress. Three times he was re-elected, and in 1893 Massachusetts sent him to the senate where he has since remained. Senator Lodge is the author of a number of historical and political works, including excellent lives of Daniel Webster and Alexander

Still Deadlocked.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.—The democrats of the New York state legislature did not yet agree on their choice for United States Senator. Sheehan still leads with ninety out of the ninety-nine votes needed for his election, but has lost one vote since yesterday,
when he received ninety-one.

That every indication points to a long drawn out fight now is most certain and it would not be surprising to see either Shepard gain in the end or have an entirely dark horse step to the front and take over the top of Chamney Depew.

The appeal of Governor Dix to have peace in the different factions of the democratic party has fallen on deaf ears and the fight between the Tammany and anti-Tammany factions continues to go along. It is to be predicted that Sheehan will lose more votes tomorrow when several of the democrats will feel that they have filed their pledges of support and go to some other candidate.

Indianapolis, Jan. 18.—The Indiana
state legislature today elected John W.
Korn, Bryan's running mate at the last presidential election, United States Senator to succeed Senator Boveridge. Korn received ninety votes on the joint ballot, the entire democratic strength, while the republicans voted solidly for Boveridge.
Both men were placed in nomination yesterday in eloquent speeches by their party leaders and the affair was a cut and dried program today.

Merely Formal.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 18.—It was merely a formal ratification of the vote of yesterday by the joint session of the legislature today that formally elected George Payne McLean
United States Senator from Connecticut.
McLean had a clear majority yesterday.

In Rhode Island.

Providence, Jan. 18.—Henry F. Lippitt was to succeed Nelson W. Allitt was today elected United States deputy on the joint ballot of the two houses. Lippitt had a majority of two in the state senate and lacked one of a majority in the house yesterday, but on joint ballot had a sufficient majority.

CHESMORE SLAYER'S
TRIAL WAS BEGUN
IN DULUTH TODAY

Youth Out Sixteen Who Killed Former Janesville Resident Faces Jury Charged With Murder
In First Degree.
(BY UNITED PRESS.)

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 18.—Charles Melodrowski, the boy who shot and killed policeman Harry Chesmore, is on trial here today for murder in the first degree. The jury is not yet completed.

Melodrowski and a companion named Johnson not only shot and killed Harry Chesmore on a street car near the Interstate bridge on the morning of January 6th. The two boys had held up and robbed a hotel earlier in the morning and Chesmore arrested them and was taking them back to the police station when killed.
Chesmore was a former resident of Janesville and Rock County, where his brothers and sisters reside. The remainders were taken there for interment, the funeral being held in Janesville January 9th, with interment at Johntown cemetery.

It is found guilty of murder in the first degree, Melodrowski can be sentenced to hang, or life imprisonment.
His companion, who did not shoot Chesmore, will probably be held for highway robbery and given a long prison sentence.

NEGRO CONGRESS
OPENS AT TUSKEGEE

Representatives of Colored Gathered for Annual Conclave.—To Discuss Negro as Farmer.
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 18.—The twentieth annual session of the Tuskegee Negro Conference opened at Tuskegee Institute with a large and representative attendance.

The feature of the program was a symposium discussion on the subject of the negro as a farmer. The question of mudding tenant farming more profitable both to the landlord and to the tenant was discussed at length. Attention was also paid to the methods for making truck farming, fruit raising, and live stock and poultry breeding profitable to the negro farmer.
Booker T. Washington in his opening address said the value of the discussions lay in the good the delegates got from them to carry home.

Tomorrow the annual Workers' Conference will be held at the Institute.

Indications point to an unusually large attendance of persons directly engaged in negro education and others interested in the uplift of the colored race.

THREE DROWNED IN GERMAN SUBMARINE

(BY UNITED PRESS.)

Berlin, Jan. 18.—It was found today that three men were lost in the disaster to the submarine U-3, from which twenty seven were rescued late yesterday. The boat sank in the harbor of Kiel. The three telephoned they had plenty of air and would stick by the boat until it was raised. Recovery of the boat today found them dead.

the American Railroad Employees and Investors' association today presented

Commerce commission in support of the proposed advance in freight rates by the railroads.

CONFERENCE OF GRAIN
MEN WITH RAILROADS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 18.—Leading grain men of several states met in conference here today with representatives of the railroads to discuss the grain shrinkage problem. The railroads have made a practice of deducting one-eighth of 1 per cent for wheat shrinkage and one-fourth of 1 per cent on coarse grain shrinkage.
The grain men contend that the roads have no right to make such reduction unless they prove that there is a natural shrinkage of grain.

Mac Resolutions Which Bring Stephenson Matter Up For Consideration.

(BY UNITED PRESS.)

Madison, Jan. 18.—The United States Senate will be asked to investigate the election of United States Senator from Wisconsin. Stephenson is alleged to have been secured by corrupt means. If two resolutions, now in course of preparation by Senator Paul Huston, democratic leader and member of the minority of the investigating committee are passed by the Senate, he would introduce the resolutions into the Senate the first of next week, one calling for a certifying of the report of the Stephenson senatorial investigating committee to the United States Senate and the other holding that the national body investigating the charges of bribery and corruption.

The leading Progressive Republican members of the legislature said today that the bill probably would be passed and the corruption charges put up to the national body.

APPOINTED GUARDIAN
OF ISAACSON BOYS

Beloit Man Guardian of Sons of Man Whose Death Was Investigated.

Judge Sale yesterday appointed H. A. Von Oven of Beloit to act as guardian for Gus and Edward Isaacson of that city, the boys whose father died under peculiar circumstances a few months ago. Both of the boys are feeble-minded; the first named being confined to the county asylum. The man, who had been ailing somewhat, was found on a couch in the kitchen of his home, dead, in the early part of December. He was the owner of a large farm and had quite a large sum of money, the amount of which cannot be ascertained. It was thought advisable by the authorities to hold an investigation and an examination of the contents of the stomach and liver were made by Prof. Smith of the Beloit college faculty. Slight traces of morphine were found, but not enough to warrant bringing charges against anyone.

The action of the Judge in appointing a guardian was the result of the condition of the two sons of the man. As the entire probating of the estate has not been finished the exact sum of money left by the man nor the value of his property cannot be found.

AT THE PLAY HOUSES

"It is like seeing an old friend to get back to this city again," remarked Sam Myers of "Baby Mine" Company, at the Myers Hotel this morning. Mr. Myers has been coming to this city for many years as agent, orator of well-known attractions.

"This city," continued Mr. Myers, "has developed into a batchelor town. There is no reason why you should not have the best of the season's attractions, and Mr. Wm. A. Brady, under whose direction this big success is being piloted, assures me that every effort will be made to book the best of the 'Brady' and Shubert attractions during the season."

"I need hardly tell you that the Brady attractions are among the most important of the season, and Mr. Brady has scored an unusual number of successes. Margaret Mayo's comedy, 'Baby Mine,' is still running at Daly's, New York, and is likely to remain there for a long time. Julie Eckert, Goodman's 'beautiful play, 'Mother,' also continues to excite unabated interest and has just started in town. 'Mother' will undoubtedly be seen here during the season. 'The Nigger,' Edward Sheldon's race probably being one of the most tremendous dramas of the year. Its productions by the New Theatre in New York, created a sensation, which is being repeated on the road. Thomas A. Wise, who has won success in 'The Gentleman from Mississippi,' will shortly be presented by Mr. Brady as Falstaff in an elaborate production of 'Henry IV.' Douglas Fairbanks, who was associated with Wise in the great New York run of 'The Gentleman from Mississippi,' is winding new laurels in 'The Cub,' founded on a series of actual incidents in a Kentucky fued by Thompson Buchanon, and goes into New York for a run. Robert Mantell is maintaining the best traditions of the Shakespeare stage, and despite those who persist in bawling the decadence of the classic drama, is making it pay. He has just successfully produced a new romantic Irish drama, 'The O'Thomas,' by Justin Huntley McCarthy. Wright Lorimer, so long and successfully identified with 'The Shepherd King,' still finds his pieturesque Biblical play a profitable vehicle for his talents, but will soon be presented by Mr. Brady in a new play, entitled, 'Daniel.' Louis Mann is winning substantial success in his new play, 'The Cheater,' but a large part of the United States failed to see him. 'The Man Who Stood Still,' last season, and it is Mr. Brady's intention at the depot recently vacated by U. B. Farrell.

Misses R. Worthing and Mrs. Walter Wetmore, who have been assisting Mrs. Will Letts, have returned to their homes.

Ben Dutcher delivered stock Monday.

Elliot Fraser was an Orfordville caller Monday.

James Houghton delivered hogs in Orfordville Monday.

LEYDEN.

Leyden, Jan. 18.—We wish to correct a mistake in one of the items in last week's paper. It was stated that the creamery made five hundred and fifty pounds of butter. It should have read, "shipped" 550 pounds.

A. F. Nowman is filling the position at the depot recently vacated by U. B. Farrell.

Misses and Mesdames Hemming, Wurster, and Aldo, together with the Misses Reilly and North spent Thursday evening at the home of Bert Hoffman.

The case weather that has been prevalent during the last week has set all the neighboring farmers to work in tobacco.

The farmers turned out in a body and filled the creamery ice house last week.

Miss Jessica North spent Saturday and Sunday with her sister here.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Byrne entertained company Monday evening.

"The Misses Agnes and Mary Reilly entertained friends Sunday evening."

"Mr. and Mrs. Will Aldo entertained relatives Sunday afternoon."

The first of a series of parties given by the Clutch club was held Jan. 14th in honor of the birthday of Miss Theodore North at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Wurster. The affair was a complete surprise to Miss North.

The evening was spent in playing progressive bridge and at eleven o'clock refreshments were served. The guests left a number of beautiful presents and everyone reported a most delightful evening.

"When they first began to criticize you I became somewhat interested and began to wonder what your Grape-Nuts breakfast food was like, and as my curiosity got the best of me, I bought a package and I liked it so well have used several packages. And to my surprise I find I am gaining in weight and feeling fine."

"Mr. Brady and his associates have secured 'Noholy's' Daughter, a new play, just produced, in London with Gerald DuMaurier in the leading role, which will be one of the handsomest and easiest theatres in New York City, which will be opened by Grace George, who is Mrs. Wm. A. Brady in private life, in a new play."

"From all of which," concluded Mr. Myers, "it will be seen that Mr. Brady and his partners are very busy people, and that their plays embrace about everything in the way of dramatic entertainment."

The great London musical success, "The Italian Princess" will shortly be produced, and in February Mr. Brady's new playhouse, the playhouse, which will be one of the handsomest and easiest theatres in New York City, which will be opened by Grace George, who is Mrs. Wm. POULTRY

COLONY HOUSE FOR POULTRY

Fowls Are More Active and There Is Less Danger From Disease by That System.

The main requirements of a good poultry house are good ventilation and protection from storms and cold winds.

Hens will not lay when weather conditions prevent them from scratching.

Colony House With Cloth Windows.

ing and exercise. Many poultry houses have proven failures because the variations in night and day temperatures were too great. Prominent authorities on the building of poultry houses state that ventilation can best be furnished by leaving one end of the house open or covered with burlap or canvas, using no glass windows unless necessary for light. The idea of building a warm house should be abandoned. It is shelter that is needed.

The house should be built in such a way that the fowls will not root near the open front where they would be exposed to winds; nor should it face the prevailing winds. A long house is more expensive to build, for a given capacity, than one more nearly square. A long, narrow house is also a cold house, having more exposed surface for a given capacity than a square house.

The size of house necessary for a certain flock will vary in different sections. Where there is little or no snow and where the fowls can be outdoors every day in the year, two square feet of floor space per fowl will be ample. Where the climate is such that the fowls will seek shelter part of the year, rather than go outdoors on the range, considerably more space should be provided, say four or five square feet per fowl. The idea should not be to crowd them so much that their activity will be interfered with. Whether the shelter is provided by enlarging the house or providing cheap scratching sheds, is immortal. Two square feet per fowl, or even less, is ample for roosting quarters.

Roosts should be made low or near the ground—not higher than two feet.

There are several reasons for this.

Fowls of the heavier breed cannot fly high, and those of the lighter breeds frequently injure the soles of their feet in jumping from high perches.

Roosts should be made all the same height; for if they are made some higher than others, the birds will at flock to the highest ones and crowd, which is undesirable.

When drooping boards are used they should be low down, to permit of easy cleaning. They should be made of matched lumber and be 20 inches wide for one perch and three feet wide for two porches, the first perch placed at least ten inches from the wall. A good roost may be made from material two by two inches, then slightly rounded on the edges.

Poultry keeping is most successful where the colony system prevails. The colony system means the housing of fowls in small houses, preferably portable, where the fowls have free range.

The chief advantage is that the fowls are more active or busier than when confined in yards; second, there is less danger from outbreaks of disease, as it is possible to keep the houses on clean ground by moving them occasionally; and third, the fowls require less feeding and care, as they pick up considerable food on the range.

Another advantage of this system is that the fowls will rid the farm of many injurious insects, such as grasshoppers. Then, the colony system will fit in with crop rotations, and for part of the year the fowls will live on the stubble fields.

The illustrations shown represent a successful colony house used at the Utah experiment station. The house has a cloth window, and the traps are very convenient, as they open from the outside.

Flock of Pure-Blood.

A flock of pure-blooded, well-bred birds is much more beautiful and far more interesting than one of scrubs of all shapes, sizes and colors, and the more interest one has in his fowls the more thought and care will be given them.

Well Bred Best.

If your chickens are well bred they will always sell for more than market price, and eggs are always in demand during the season of incubation for almost double the amount you can obtain for them for table use.

THE MOTIVE POWER.

In this rapidly developing age much thought and attention is given to motive power. The factories which a few years ago were equipped with belts and pulleys, are supplied today with individual motors for every piece of machinery, and the current which supplies the power may come from a local power house, or be transmitted from a power plant many miles away.

All along the line of the New York Central road, from Buffalo to Syracuse, are steel towers carrying the wires which connect a dozen cities with the great power station at Niagara, and the waters of the giant cataract are harnessed for the work.

Back of all this development is a subtle power, so intangible that it is more mysterious than the electric current, and that is the power known as "gray matter" locked up in the cells of the human brain.

No man has ever witnessed the workings of this wonderful force, but results proclaim its efficiency in every department of toil.

The new terminal station of the Chicago & Northwestern road in Chicago, soon to be occupied, is the finished product of one man's brain, just as the great station in New York, where the Pennsylvania Central lands its traffic, is the finished product of the brain of the late President Cresson.

Marvin Hughtt, who retired from the presidency of the Chicago & Northwestern road, the other day, at the age of 73, after directing the affairs of the company for twenty-four years, was the motive power which made his company the best in the land, in many respects, and the new terminal station will long endure as a monument to his memory.

It is always interesting to study the history of men of this class, and a little incident of Mr. Hughtt's early life, from the Technical World, is worth reading. The experience related occurred back in the early days before there was a time limit on other labor or ambition.

"Now let me see if I have this story straight."—It was a young school master who was speaking. "You say he sat at the train-dispatcher's keyboard for thirty-six hours; he personally directed the transportation of those thousands of troops then just as the whole army had arrived at its destination, an order came to carry it back; and this same young man did not give up until the job was finished. How long did you say he was at his post, twenty-four hours?"

"You," repeated the man of affairs who had been relating the incident, "that young fellow was a division superintendent for the I. C. railroad during the Civil war times and the story is that in the midst of a big rush of business his division got orders from Washington to 'transport those troops at once.' The overworked train dispatchers went all to pieces and the rest of the trainmen had a panic. Things looked pretty blue, but one fellow kept his head—the division superintendent. He sat down at the dispatcher's key, rolled off those train one by one, and never gave up, they say, until every Yankee soldier was past the last switch. Then, like lightning out of a clear sky, came the order: 'Move troops back at once,' which never flared. Not much! He did not let up until he got those Yanks on free soil again and every engine back in the roundhouse! Now that's what I call nerve!"

"I don't know how long he slept after the three days' job was over," the man concluded, "but when he woke up, he found he had been made superintendent of the entire road. His name was Marvin Hughtt, and for the past twenty-four years he has been president of the Chicago & Northwestern road. The other day he retired at the age of seventy-three to become chairman of its board of directors."

The brains, perseverance and natural force combined in the person of Marvin Hughtt have been the chief factor in the phenomenal success of this transportation system which has spread over the northwest. Without such success it would not be able today to spend $24,000,000 in perfecting its terminal facilities in the city of Chicago. When the new station, which faces south on Madison street between Clinton and Canal streets is opened, 200 trains with a capacity for carrying 85,000 people daily, will steam in and out of its gigantic train shed.

A PRACTICAL REFORM.
The little city of Paris, Texas, with a population of 12,000 has introduced a reform so practical, and developed it so successfully, that it recommends itself and is worth adopting by other cities. It is nothing more or less than an "abattoir" or city slaughter house built and operated by the city.

The demand for this innovation was created by Mayor McCulston, and the development of the scheme was brought about by his personal efforts. The unsanitary conditions of the local slaughter houses, and the high price of packing house products shipped in, inspired the thought which resulted in the city bonding itself for $10,000 to build the plant, which has been in operation for a year, and was self-supporting from the start.

The local butchers were much opposed to the plan at first, but are now the most enthusiastic supporters, as the meat is delivered to them on the hook, after being in cold storage for a week, at less expense than they could handle it themselves.

The force to run this city slaughter house and cold storage plant is composed of six men—an inspector, a manager, a foreman of the killing room, and three assistants, representing an expense including interest on bonds of $1000 per month. The price for slaughtering beaver is $1.25 per head and for hogs and smaller animals from 75 cents to $1.00 per head. This includes delivering to the ten shops, after hanging for a week. The dealers deliver the animals at the house, and the hides and pelts are returned to them with the meat. All by-products are utilized and the receipts from the plant the first year exceeded $9,000.

It makes a home market for the farmer who formerly shipped his stock to packing houses, and the people are so well pleased that they propose to improve the plant and double its capacity.

The mayor suggests that if these plants were generally established, through the west, that it would result in wholesaling meat at cheaper prices, as they would all be home competitors of the much discussed meat trust.

The "Technical World" for February has an illustrated article on this municipal slaughter house which is well worth reading.

None of the transatlantic lines carry automobiles uncrated, consequently the majority of these lines have made special arrangements by means of which passengers who are taking automobiles abroad may avoid petty inconveniences. One of the big lines has arranged for the necessary boxing at the pier. The tourists are thereby enabled to use their automobile up to the day prior to sailing, when they run them directly to the pier. The boxes are built in such manner that they may be taken apart on arrival abroad and used again for the return shipment. The method of packing is shown by illustrations appearing in the February number of Popular Mechanics magazine.

In the heart of the "Great White Way" on Broadway, New York, has recently been erected a tower 110 feet high, devoted to electric signs. The tower contains 120,000 feet of advertising space and cost $40,000. The general effect is marvelously beautiful, but the signs displayed for a brief moment, as they appear and disappear, attract but little attention, and results will be less effective than a window in the New York World.

The population of Chicago and Tokyo, Japan are the same, with the latter only a few hundred, in the lead. Paris is the third largest city in the world, numbering 2,763,000. New York is second, with 4,767,000, while London leads the procession with 7,428,000.

WARMLY COMMENDED WORK OF THE BOARD

Investigator Who Went Over the Books of Board Makes His Report.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 18.—Warm commendation of the systematic methods employed by the state board of control in the management of the state's charitable and penal institutions is expressed in the report of Q. F. Snyder of Milwaukee, the public accountant to whom was entrusted the work of auditing the accounts of the board, in a report to Gov. McGovern. The report especially makes mandatory mention of M. J. Tappins, the secretary, who has been associated with the work for nearly two decades, and long has been regarded as the genius of the system.

In the matter of revenues, the auditor finds that the state has received all money necessary from the various activities at the institutions under the board's care. Under the head of expenditures, the report finds the books have been "exceedingly well kept, with an accuracy and neatness that is commendable." "In the examination of more than 13,000 accounts, aggregating total expenditures in excess of $2,350,000, no consequential errors were found, credit for which in no small part is due to the intelligent and well directed efforts of the secretary, M. J. Tappins," declares the auditor.

It was found that all special funds had been expended in the directions intended, and while the examiner finds no legal or moral fault with the practice, he notes as a matter of course that the board had found it necessary in many cases to transfer money from the current expense fund for the purpose of completing buildings and other enterprises for which the special funds proved inadequate. Recommendation is made that the inventories hereafter be kept by the "progressive" card system, and that the present system of duplicate bookkeeping be abolished. It is declared that the bookkeeping should be centralized, which would mean the enlargement of the force at Madison, cutting down the clerical forces at the various institutions, but would result finally in the saving of money for the state.

Accounting for the suggestion of changes, the report says:

"The necessity for these changes is largely the result of natural growth and expansion of institutions, and is not to be construed as the result of neglect or indifference on the part of the board or of any official thereof; inasmuch as the impressions that were received during the progress of this examination of the board and all its employees was that of the highest integrity, and that they were loyal and faithful to the best interests of the state.

EPISCOPAL BISHOP WAS CONSECRATED

Rev. Julius W. Atwood—Consecrated Missionary Bishop of Arizona in Boston Today.

PARIS TO THE GAZETTE.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 18.—With incensing ceremonies in Trinity Church today, the Rev. Julius W. Atwood, D. D., of Phoenix, was consecrated missionary bishop of Arizona, under the terms of his recent election by the General Convention of the Episcopal Church at Cheltenham, Bishop-elect Atwood was attended in the solemn procession by the Rev. Dr. William D. Maxon of Detroit, Mich., and the Rev. Dr. Henry S. Nash of the faculty of the Cambridge Theological School.

Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts officiated at the consecration, assisted by Bishop Hall of Vermont and Bishop Conquer of Virginia. Bishop Atwood's presenters were Bishop Codman of Maine and Bishop Lines of New Jersey. The consecration sermon was preached by Bishop Grear of New York.

The new bishop is a graduate of the Cambridge Theological School in the class of 1882, and was ordained to the diaconate that year by Bishop Padlock and advanced to the priesthood the following year. He was rector of a church in Ipswich, Mass., from 1882 to 1887, when he received a call to St. James' Church, Providence, 1894. During the succeeding three years he was rector of Trinity Church, Columbus, O., then, owing to the illness of his wife, Dr. Atwood went to Arizona and was associated with Trinity Church at Phoenix until appointed archdeacon of Arizona. During the early years of his residence in Arizona he now, bishop, founded a tuberculosis hospital which has been doing a splendid work in the treatment of patients afflicted with tubercular trouble.

It is more important that you should oxygenize your blood than that you should eat or drink. Lungs cannot go long without sustenance, like stomach, brain, without oxygen will not make pure blood.

Therefore down with the conspiracy! If any man shuts the doors and fails to pull up the windows, shoot him on the spot—or worse to that effect.

In answer to the machinations of the foul intrigues designed to kill you, shut off your oxygen you should open the windows—at the tops, mind you, or the transoms.

Defeat the plotters.

Half the race is dying because of the conspiracy. Get off the fresh air you can command. Detoxify your lungs by outdoor exercise. Walking is good. Empty and fill your lungs repeatedly. God did not make you to be choked by impure air.

And when you sleep—pay attention, please—open the windows top and bottom if possible, but surely at the top!

You are on the defensive against this general conspiracy. Therefore remember the cruel law—it is cruel?—the law of the survival of the fittest.

Open your windows! Down with the conspiracy!

Greatest Cane-Sugar Grower.

It may surprise many to learn that India is the greatest cane-sugar producing country in the world, the industry's crop amounting to 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 tons. Notwithstanding this fact, its sugar market has been captured first by the beet sugar and later by cane sugar from Mauritius and Java.

THE GILA MONSTER

By DAVID WALTER CHURCH

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Little Inez Basquemento, a Mexican girl I saw while engineering in the southwest, was a merry child (if she had been born in the north she would have been a child; but, being a Mexican, she was a woman). She might have been anywhere from fourteen to sixteen. She played the guitar and sang with a little birdlike voice, jabbered Spanish musically, danced, and her face wore a perpetual smile, which was for every one. But if any person attempted to "guy" her she would knit her brows and shrink away as though tormented. And once her confidence was lost by a bit of banter her good will could never be regained.

There was a young engineer engaged on the same work as myself out there, the time fresh from one of the "Tech" schools of the northern states. He was twenty years old, handsome as a picture and as bright as a new brass button. What must he do but make love to Inez with all the recklessness of youth regardless of the consequences both to himself and her! I, who was older, saw his danger and warned him. I know what was up, for in the evening when the day's work was over I would hear on the Basquemento veranda the twang of Inez's guitar, her little flute voice, her merry laughter mingled with sounds which I recognized as coming from Ben Eggleston, the young man who was sowing the wind to reap the whirlwind!

"You little fool," I would say to him, "don't you know that the girl is a mingling of child and woman—clueless in experience, woman in development; that she will fall in love with you and then—?"

"I'll break it off at once," would be the young man's invariable reply. The boy fully intended to keep his resolution when it was made, but gave up trying to do so when it got cold. The next night I would hear the same pleasant sounds on the veranda and knew that they were breeding, the same storm.

This went on till the work on that division was finished and we were about to move. Eggleston assumed we there wouldn't be any trouble. The girl was such a child that he couldn't believe she had been attracted to him as she might have been if more of a woman. He was going away and would simply bid her goodby as he would any other girl of immature years whose companion he had been.

"My advice to you," I said, "is to do nothing such. Go without saying anything about your going."

He didn't take my advice. The day before leaving he told her in a carefree way that the engineering party to which he belonged was going to move its headquarters.

"And I will not see you again?" said the girl, her smile vanishing.

"Perhaps not," replied Ben, not thinking it wise to leave her to look forward to meeting him again. "You'll grow up soon and get married. Then you won't want any young men friends like me."

In order the better to kill in her all expectation of getting any nearer to him he told her he had a girl in the north.

That evening I met Inez carrying a cudgel in one hand and a canvas bag in the other. She wore the same innocent look she had always worn, but I noticed a peculiar glitter in her eye. There was something inhomogeneous in a little girl's carrying a bludgeon, and, naturally fearful for Ben Eggleston, I could not help vaguely connecting the act with the hitting he was giving her. She passed me without looking back, and, taking position behind a tree, I watched her.

She went along, looking about her on the ground as if searching for something. She spent half an hour in this way

HUNDREDS VISIT EXHIBIT

And view the Strange Composite Gathering of the Many Different Blue Blooded Chicks.

That the people of Janesville and the surrounding country are taking a live interest in the poultry show at the West Side Rink, is evidenced by the crowds which have been coming yesterday and today to witness one of the largest if not the best exhibits of high grade chickens and poultry stock in the country. Although the show was only partly under way yesterday, about 500 people came to look at this interesting display of the many breeds of poultry.

Chicken fanciers of Janesville are not a bit behind the contestants for honors from the surrounding states and it is a source of gratification to the officers of the association to see the way in which local people have displayed their confidence in their blue ribbon fowl. In entering them against the array of boasted winners from

Persons who have only held poultry as a passing interest in the past were at the rink yesterday and spent an hour or more in watching the many varieties of contestants for first honors at this show. There is a very interesting collection of features at the end of the building. Here are the pigeons, Canadian geese, a score or more of ducks and several turkeys.

H. T. Holmlund, the judge was busy until midnight last night and had some 500 birds to look over today. The judging of the Rhode Island Reds has been completed as well as the pigeons and this afternoon the officials began the work of hanging up the red, white and blue ribbons on the cages of the lucky birds.

With the great number of entries and the high standing of the judge it can be seen that a ribbon at this show will mean a great deal to the owners of the chickens.

An extra line of coops was put up along the north side of the rink this morning to accommodate the large number of additional entries. Taking it all in all the present show has been one of the most successful exhibits of fowl that has ever been undertaken in Janesville. The officers of the association are most pleased with the attendance which will increase from now on until the close on Saturday night.

One does not have to be a chicken fancier to enjoy the sights and be interested in the fowls on exhibition. Every bird from the staid old Plymouth Rock with his array of speckled hens to the proud little bantam and his shrill crew, are to be found. It is a show that delights children and grown up alike and has a diversity of exhibits to please even the critical chicken man.

A good way to keep cheese moist and to prevent it from moulding is to wrap it in a cloth wet in vinegar and cover this with a dry cloth.

Retirement Of Rear Admiral Barry
Does Not End the Naval Trouble.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—Not in years have the navy officers been so agitated over any mystery as that surrounding the retirement of Rear Admiral E. B. Barry, commander of the Pacific fleet. This step followed the filing of personal charges against him by officers. The nature of these charges is not stated and the inside of the story may never be known.

Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas was hastily summoned from shore leave at Santa Barbara in order to take charge of the Pacific fleet. According to Barry's statement, he retired partly from public and partly from private reasons.

AMERICAN LIQUORS
WIN OVER FOREIGN

Imports of Foreign Liquors Were Greatly Cut Down During the Past Year.

New York, Jan. 18.—Native beer and whiskey scored a big victory over high priced imported wines in 1910, according to Pommarts wine and spirit circular just issued. While the importation of champagne, burgundy and Bordeaux last year was approximately only half of what it was the year before, there were 3,481,629 more barrels of beer brewed in this country and 153,321,622 gallons of whiskey distilled, an immense increase over 1909. Most of this increase was for home consumption.

During 1910, 59,485,117 barrels of beer were required to stock the Amer-

Clothing of Trees.

Mr. David Garrelk Longworth, who has been travelling in Africa, spent several months in Nairobi. "I found the natives making good use of the bark of the trees they cut down," he states. "After drying it they hammered it into shape and made decent clothing for themselves."

Valuable Land.

The proposition is being discussed to pull down the Bank of England building, which is one story in height and covers eight acres, house it in a seven-story building on a portion of the site and sell the remainder of the land, the value of which is estimated at $3,500,000.

is built close to the ground to meet the demand for a low down type of machine.

It is lower than any other spreader and can be loaded easier.

It has only one wheel in front and the pole does not swing and thresh about on rough ground. The line of draft is high like a wagon and does not lift the front of the spreader. This construction brings the load nearer the team.

This is without a doubt the best, most efficient and economical manure spreader on the market. Call and see it at the Diplomatic Major Higginson.

In a signed and published letter, Major Henry L. Higginson thanks the Boston women for taking off their hats so quietly and courteously at the Symphony Orchestra's last concert.

It may not be unusual," he adds, "to remind the ladies that many men are bald and suffer from unavoidable dandruff, but do not wear their hats.

Perhaps the ladies will draw comfort from the fact that their hair, hereafter to be in view, is at the worst more attractive than their hats, and is often beautiful." That was gallant, diplomatic and truthful.

Wisdom of Solomon.

In a dog case at Felxstowe, England, one witness testified that the dog whose loss was being sued for was worth $125, while another swore it was worthless. So the Judge awarded $62.50 damages as a fair average.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON.

THE lady-who-always-knows-somehow stopped in at our house this afternoon on her way back from the station.

The lady-who-always-knows-somehow cannot be on the sunny side of forty, but she is one of those wonderful grown-ups who have not lost the key to young people's friendships.

She is the dearly treasured friend of some half a dozen delightful young girls, and she is continually entertaining one or the other of them under her hospitable roof. Yesterday she had just been down to the station to see off one of her prime favorites after a holiday visit, and was sadly anticipating how lonely she was going to be.

"There is one thing I particularly enjoy about that girl's visits," she observed musingly, "and that is, there are no loose ends to them."

Maybe you'll require that translated.

"Why, I mean this," explained the lady-who-always-knows-somehow, "When she goes home she takes all her belongings with her. Every one. She doesn't get home and then write me by the next mail to tell me what a delightful visit she had—and will; if it isn't too much bother, just send along her toothbrush and a half a dozen other articles which she overlooked in packing."

"That's the way most of them do, you know. There's Lucia, for instance. Lucia's a dear girl and I love to have her come, but oh, I hate to have her go. And not only because I miss her, either, but because I don't miss her belongings. I don't think it'd mind quite so much if she didn't select the most up-to-date things to do with to do up bundles. Anything but a perfectly plain, square package looks like a problem in quadratics to me, and last time she was here Lucia left an umbrella, a toothbrush and a hand mirror. I thought I should have to send for a packer."

"Of course they always say to send the things C. O. D. or let them know what it costs—but they don't seem to realize that the trouble is anything. They seem to take it as a matter of course that you should leave whatever you are doing, hunt up their belongings, do them up, and travel down to the postoffice or expressman's with them."

"If I had a daughter of my own it seems to me I'd insist on her punishing herself for the carelessness of leaving things by simply doing without anything she left behind until she could get it herself."

"It is all quite preventable carelessness, you know. It's simply because they know they have some up-to-date things they can call upon to pick up after them that they don't really try to pick up after themselves."

"I had a grand proof of this when Amy went abroad. Amy is quite as bad as Lucia, except that she doesn't always select such awkward articles to leave. Well, I was perfectly sure she would leave a trall of her belongings all over Europe and I asked her about it when she got back and what do you think she said? 'Oh, no, I didn't leave but two or three little things in all my trunks. You see, I knew I absolutely couldn't get them if I did!'

"What's that-naive?"

"And doesn't it show what sheer unnecessary carelessness it all is?"

The lady-who-always-knows-somehow is a good judge of girls.

So it seems to me her warmth on this subject is worth noticing as a hint of the hostess' feelings for the girl who goes visiting.

The KITCHEN CABINET

ALL WITH the Coffee, all the years provide,
Its chemicals may turn me green 'inside,
But all my fears are scattered to the Winds.

When over the fragrant Pot I can pre-

A Kitchen Drama.

Act 1—Mrs. L. K.—I certainly must be slow, here it is three o'clock and the next dish is just out of the way. Here you are, all dressed for the afternoon, walking a half-mile to get here, and your family no smaller than mine.

Mrs. L. K.—That is easy to explain. Mrs. L. K.—Why? What do you mean?

Mrs. S. K.—You have walked a need, less half mile in getting your meal, because of the size of your kitchen. Here is the range on one side ten feet from the table, the sink on the other side an equal distance; the pantry at another point of the compass, and if you do as I do, you probably have made several trips to the cellar. "Let me have a pencil: A dozen trips to the pantry and return makes 240 feet; two dozen trips from stove to table, 480; six times from stove to pantry, a distance of 15 feet and return, 180.

"Four trips to the cellar, a distance of 30 feet and return—240 feet.

Extra steps to the sink, cupboard and dining table, 230 feet—all together 1,380 feet, or a little over half a mile, and the same distance is traveled in clearing up after a meal. At least half the walking could be saved by a properly arranged kitchen and proper planning.

Mrs. L. K.—Well, I do declare. I never realized that a large kitchen wasted so much energy.

Mrs. S. K.—Oh, well, that isn't all: three meals a day in a year makes 548 miles walked.

Act 2—Mrs. L. K. carried out in a dead faint.

Nellie Maxwell.

Put in Two Classes.

Oscar Hammerstein, at a farwell dinner in New York that preceded his departure for London, made an amusing speech on music. Mr. Hammerstein, in the course of this speech, praised Richard Strauss, Leopold Stokowski, Puccini and Debussy. Then he mentioned with scorn a half dozen comic opera stars. "Those fellows," he said, "may be divided into two broad classes. First, those who plagiarize from the street places, and second, those who write for them."

A Gift Book.

"Yes, do you send me a book? . . . not a bargain book bought from a haberdasher, but a beautiful book, a book to carry—peculiar, distinctive, individual; a book that hath first caught your eye and then pleased your fancy written by an author with a tender wit, all right out of his heart. We will read it together in the gloaming, and when the gathering dusk doth blur the page, and sit with hearts too full for speech and think it over." Dorothy Wordsworth in Coleridge.

Brown Betty.

This is an economical dessert of which the children are particularly fond. Chop fine some sour apples, and for each cupful use a half-cupful of fine bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a cupful of chopped raisins, a little cinnamon, grated lemon rind or nutmeg and a table-spoonful of butter. Butter a pudding dish; put in a layer of apples and raisins; sprinkle over this sugar and spice; then put on a layer of bread crumbs and a few dots of butter and continue with the various layers until all the ingredients are used. The top layer should be of the crumbs and bits of butter. Cover closely and bake about twenty minutes; uncover and brown. It can be served plain with sauce, with butter and sugar or with cream as preferred.

Mother's Indian Pudding.

Put two quarts of milk in a kettle and just bring to a boil. Pour into a large pan and add one even tablespoon salt. Sift in slowly with the hand, stirring all the time, a pint dash half full (just as she did) of boiled Indian meal—not granulated—two-thirds cup of molasses, or enough to make quite sweet, no eggs, no spice. Pour into a large brown earthen pudding pot, must not be more than two-thirds full. Put in oven and pour over top one-half pint milk. Don't stir. Bake in a moderate oven three hours. If it scorches, cover with thin tin plate. This makes its own sauce.

Carrot Slices.

Grate enough mature clean carrots to fill a pint measure. Do not remove the skins. Add three-fourths of a pound of pure hog's lard. Put in a spider to cook, and keep stirring until it gets as brown as a chestnut. Strain through cheesecloth while hot and add about an ounce of yellow beeswax. Apply on a cloth. Before applying to a sore it is well to rub on a little flaxseed jelly made by covering a little flaxseed with boiling water and leaving it until it forms a jelly.

Egg Toast.

Scoop out the centers of stale biscuits, then brown them in the oven. Pour boiling water over them and drain at once. Fill with hard cooked eggs, cut in halves, arranged on a platter and pour a well-seasoned cream sauce (hot) over the whole. This is a pleasing change from the regular milk toast.

Skins Add Flavor.

Some of the best part of the apple is wasted when the fruit is pared for apple sauce. Core the fruit and then cut into quarters. Cook until tender and press through a colander. The skins will give to the sauce a bit of color and add to its flavor.

Anchovy Slippets.

Toast white bread, in thin narrow pieces, until it is hard and brown. Cover each thinly with Russian anchovy paste and put a squeeze of lemon on top. Such delectable morsels go well before other eating; they whet the appetite for more.

Prunes on Toast.

Toast slices of stale bread lightly and butter each slice. Lay on a platter and pour over them stewed prunes sweetened to taste. Heap whipped cream on each slice, and serve at once.

THE WORLD OWES YOU NOTHING

Don't think for a minute that the world owes you a living for it doesn't. On the contrary, each person owes it to the world to give something to it, and the position is rarely reversed. You remember in one of the old school readers there was a story of a shaggy around whom everything went to ruin? His home was dilapidated, his children were in rags, the grounds around his home were run to weeds, the fence was broken and the gate hung by a single hinge. Accompanying the story was a picture of it man. He was leaning on the rickety gatepost, his hair unkempt and his clothes in tatters; his eyes looked sleepy and between his lips was a pipe. To your childish fancy he was repulsive—so repulsive that you early imbibed an idea of the standard of life you wanted for yourself.

It was that story and that picture that gave you your first fear of failure and consequent poverty; that gave you your first fear of being a shiftless, non-producing member of society. You couldn't endure the picture because there was aspiration and determination in you to be self-supporting and to rise above the level of the mediocre. That picture and that story gave you the incentive to strive to put the best of yourself into your work. You may, at times, have grown weary and disheartened, but there was always that within you that drove you on to achievement.

The shaggy of the old school book represents the type of person who believes that the world "owes him a living." Each morning when he arises he probably says to himself, "What's the use of my working?" The world owes me a living. Food, shelter, clothing and fuel will come, so what's the use of wearing myself out in useless work?"

This kind of man always stays at the bottom. He never gets anywhere. He never wins the respect of his fellowmen and can scarcely have the respect of his own conscience. He is an encumberer of the world and the world owes him absolutely nothing.

The shaggy doesn't live; he merely exists. He cannot get pleasure out of life, for to do that a man must put something into it. The field mother that scurries through the tall grass on place; the bird that warbles in the untrained bush in the yard or any other of the creatures of field or air is really happier than he because they are contributing to the comfort and contentment of the world, or are, at least, working for the food and shelter of those they got.

Such a man cannot feel deep in his heart that a part of all he sees in life. He certainly cannot conscientiously feel that the air, the sunshine and the bounties of nature are his on an equal feeling with those who have given their time and energy to help create the wealth and comfort of the world. Men of this calibre cannot feel that they have a definite fixed place in the world, for such places belong only to those who are willing to work to hold them. So it is true that we are willing to admit the assertion that "He is what we make it."

Date Gem.

To one-half cup of stoned, chopped dates add the well-beaten yolk of one egg, a pinch of salt, one-half pint of sweet milk, two scant cups of flour in which two teaspoons of baking powder have been sifted, adding a tablespoon of oil or butter before beating in the whipped white of the egg. Bake for 20 minutes rather briskly.

For Hot Cakes.

When making buckwheat, cornmeal or other griddle cake, try adding a tablespoonful of olive oil to the batter. It will not affect the taste at all, but will impart a delicate brown to the cakes and do away with the necessity for greasing the griddle.

You Can Be Made Well If You Will Come to the Chiropractors

Every disease known to mankind yields to Chiropractic adjustments. Chiropractic is a science of old truths, the most wonderful aid to mankind in centuries. It's a new science, that analyzes and locates unerringly the physical cause of disease, and provides a means of adjusting or removing the cause more promptly, radically and permanently than any other method known at the present time. These may seem bold statements to make. Yet there is plenty of proof to back them up, if you are sick and suffering. If you have tried the medical profession and failed to be cured, come to us. Ninety-eight per cent of the people that come to the Chiropractors are made well, and this notwithstanding the fact that 75 per cent of those same people HAVE BEEN GIVEN UP by the medical profession.

Call for an examination and advice in regard to your troubles. Even though slight, they may be nature's danger signals of serious ailments.

A Slip of Language.
The audience at the last Edinburgh university concert was astounded when Professor Necks, who has been professor of music in Edinburgh university for nearly 20 years, addressed them in German. When he had finished a little speech, unintelligible to most of his hearers, some one told him what he had done, whereupon he laughed heartily and repeated his address in English. The explanation of his unconscious lapse into his native tongue was that one of the performers at the concert had spoken to him in German a moment before.—Glasgow Herald.

The Skin and Not the Blood.
Until recently it has been a generally accepted proposition that eczema was a disease of the blood, and that in order to cure it, the blood must be purified and enriched by "internal remedies." Careful experiments and scientific investigations have taught us that eczema is purely a skin disease, and curable through the skin alone. A great majority of persons afflicted with eczema have no other ailment, which is accepted as positive proof that it is purely a skin disease. Having established this fact, the chemists of the American Drug and Pharmacy Association set about to compound a prescription that would successfully cope with this disease, and after much investigating brought out Meritol Eczema Remedy, the effect of which is marvelous. If you are afflicted with this loathsome disease, do not delay trying Meritol Eczema Remedy. You will be surprised at its prompt action, its soothing effect and its permanent results. "It's not so very much, but it will mean an immense lot to us. What people die in the arctic is not so often disease or accident, or even, directly, cold or starvation. They die more often of disgust and weariness and exhaustion. Your father knew that, and he set apart from his general stores some luxuries and delicacies, or things that would seem to be such to men in their plight, to be used against emergency. I'm sure that's why he took me up there and laid them away. Part of them are left. I wish he could have known to whom they were going to be of use. There's a little case with brandy in it, a good-sized pot nearly full of beef extract, a jar of dried eggs, three tins of condensed milk, a big ten-pound box of Albert biscuits."

His voice broke off there sharply, but without the downward inflection she would have expected had he reached the end. So she looked quickly and curiously up into his face. As quickly, her eyes sought the bit of paper which still lay open in his hand.

"You didn't finish," she said. "There was something else."

"I thought too late. Oh! it's nothing, but it caught me—rather, and I thought I would spare you the twinge that finding it had given me. I might better have read it right out. It was a big plum pudding, in a tin, you know—Cross & Blackwell's. But there it was, waiting, I suppose, to lend some sort of an air of festivity to their next Christmas."

The girl rose from her seat beside him and going over to the window, stood for a while gazing up the beach.

It was just about the same time in the afternoon that it had been yesterday when he set out, a-wling, to find her, and had come flying down out of the sky to drive away the sudden nameless terror which had beset her. That thought led him, now to clamber up some sticks of wood, rather too large to carry, which had been lying on the beach near where he had found her. Thinking that it would be a good time to get them and drag them in, he got a harpoon line, and it was the girl's question what he meant to do with the rope, which caused him to tell her what part of the beach he intended to visit. He asked her then if she cared to come with him, but, after a moment's hesitation, she declined.

"It will be high time for supper before you can get back," she said, "and I'd better stay here and get it ready, that is, unless I can help you."

He set off alone.

For awhile the occupation of settling their disordered living room to rights and getting the supper started were sufficient to take the whole of the girl's attention. But later, when it was a question merely of waiting for the pot to boil, and of not watching it so that it would boil sooner, she moved restlessly to the door and stood there, before the hut, gazing down the beach in the direction Cayley had taken. He was already out of sight around the headland.

She wished she had gone with Phillip, and she gazed with straining eyes toward the narrow bit of sheltered beach around the base of the headland which was the place where he must appear. He was not to be expected yet, not for a long time, probably, for his progress, dragging those great sticks he had set out to bring home, must be slow.

And then, even as she looked, she saw him, not moving slowly with his burden, but running—running at his topmost speed, like a man in fear of something.

Instinctively she moved forward to meet him, and this move of hers enabled him to see her. He slackened his pace instantly, and waved his hand toward the hut. She obeyed the imperative gesture of his, without hesitation, but still remained in the doorway, watching him as he rapidly drew nearer.

When he had got near enough so that she could see his face and read, more or less, what she saw there, she again moved forward to meet him, and this time he did not wave her back. When he came within arm's reach of her, he caught her and held her tight in his two hands.

"What is it, Phillip?" she asked, searching the depth of his eyes and trying to plumb the horror she saw in them. "What happened out there?"

"Nothing—happened. But I saw something there that made me anxious for your safety. . . . It's all right now, you're safe. Nothing has happened here, has there, while I have been gone?"

"Nothing. What could have happened, Phillip? It can't be anything that you're afraid to tell me," she went on, for he had not answered her. "There can't be anything you'd be afraid to tell me now—not after yesterday."

"Oh, no; it's not so bad as that, but I saw that I had been wrong to leave you, even for that little while. You see the sight of the place brought back to my mind what you had told me yesterday of the terror you had felt there, and of the thing that you saw in the twilight. And so I looked about, and—Jeanne, it was no baseless terror, no product of the twilight and the fact that you were far from home. There was something there, slipping along from the shelter of one boulder to that of another. I found the ground in the snow. They weren't men, but they were men, from you."

but the fact that it was actually short, or gave him a sort of excuse for avoiding another visit, just now, to the scene of his discomfiture of the night before. He swore at himself, not so much for taking this course as for the reasons which his common sense alleged against him.

His present route took him close to the gold ledge, and the sight of the inexhaustible, precious, useless metal that remained here brought upon him for the first time, in full force, a sense of his loss, a sense of what that luckless trip ashore from the Aurora in search of that rosewood box had cost him.

At an increased pace he descended from the glacier, crossed the valley and scaled the landward side of one of the mountains of the coast range, to a notch where he could command a view of the sea to the westward.

He saw there what, in the bottom of his mind, he had all along been sure he would see—nothing but another barren, bleak horizon.

At that, for a while, his fortitude broke down, and he raved and wept and cursed like one demented. But at last, spent, sobered, conscious once more of sharp hunger, he climbed a little farther up the mountain to a ledge, where, as his infinite knowledge of the country led him to expect, he found a number of loons sitting. He killed one of these birds with a dart, and then, like the brute he was, ate it raw and warm.

By that time it was late in the afternoon. Dravado, combined with a more real belief than he had yet succeeded in retaining, to the effect that all his terror of the night before had resulted from nothing more serious than nightmare, led him to decide to go home by way of the beach, rather than along the difficult interior trail up which he had come.

The descent from the cliff-head to the beach was nothing to a man of his inhuman strength and activity, though an ordinary skilled mountaineer might have hesitated before attempting it. Nevertheless, two-thirds of the way down he nearly fell—but for luck he would have fallen, for he caught a glimpse of a lonely figure, a quarter of a mile away, perhaps, seated upon a ledge, bending forward, chin in hand, in an attitude which recalled, and horribly echoed, that of the man he long ago had murdered.

When he had steadied himself a little, he made his way cautiously down to the level of the beach. His emotions were divided about equally between fear and anger, the anger existing because of the fear.

With infinite caution he approached that lonely, unsuspecting figure, slipping from the shelter of one rock to that of one a little nearer.

Three times his left hand drew back the throwing-stick, balanced and aimed along a line that would send its thin ivory dart as swiftly and as surely to that beautiful throat as the one that had found and transfixed Perry Hunter's; and three times his muscles braced themselves for the effort to propel it. But each time, with a breathless oath, he lowered the weapon again, and with the back of his hairy hand wiped the sweat from his forehead.

The act had none of the quality of mercy in it; it was simply the result of a logical dilemma. If the thing he saw before him were a ghost, the ghost of the man he had already murdered, his dart would do no harm. If it were not a ghost; if it were what it looked more and more like as he drew nearer, a living, breathing woman—he looked his lips and wrung them with his hand—if it were a woman, he did not want to kill her. If he could be sure, could only be sure, he would drop his weapon and make one rush and hold her helpless in those great hands of his.

And with every five paces that lessened the distance between them, that certainty grew upon him. No, she was no immortal spirit of a man long dead. She was alive; warm. He was near enough now to make out the soft curve of her throat, the retreating and returning color which bathed cheeks and forehead. He could see the faint rise and fall of her breast when she breathed. He laid the throwing-stick upon the ice, drew nerves and muscles taut for his rush.

Then, just then, he saw the thing that made Jeanne close her eyes, the flashing sword-like of that great, golden Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache.

Cure every kidney ill.

Janesville citizens endorse them.

Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, 118 Terrace St., Janesville, Wis., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney trouble for ten or twelve years. My kidneys became sluggish and their failure to do their work properly caused me to become weak and helpless. The kidney secretions were very unnatural and often my joints were sore and swollen. I had almost given up hope of getting relief when I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a supply at the People's Drug Co., and they soon restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I advise other kidney sufferers to try this remedy." (Statement given in August, 1908.)

Confirmed Proof.

Mrs. Johnson was interviewed on September 23, 1910, and she added to the above: "I take pleasure in again recommending Doan's Kidney Pills and advising their use in all cases of kidney trouble. I am still free from kidney complaint and my back does not bother me in any extent."

at wing; and the thing it bore turned upon the other.

Reeson dropped down, as if he had been blasted by the sight of a sword-edged archangel. In the shelter of his rock, he lay there, prone, hugging his head in his arms. He did not rouse himself, did not succeed in forcing his treacherous nerves and muscles to obey his will until it was quite dark. Then, without a glance behind him, he arose and began scrambling madly up the broken face of the talus, and, reaching the top of it, went on and scaled the cliff itself. It was afeat which even he could hardly have accomplished, except under the eye of terror.

At an increased pace he descended from the glacier, crossed the valley and scaled the landward side of one of the mountains of the coast range, to a notch where he could command a view of the sea to the westward.

DAILY DIET HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN
Food Specialist.

SUDDEN CHANGES DISORGANIZE NUTRITION.

Any farmer knows what to expect if his cows spend a day in the cabbage or turnip field. Instead of the pasture, or if his horses suddenly quit an exclusive diet of hay for growing clover, but he may go through life without observing the same principle in his own case. Indiscriminate mixing of foods tends to disorganize nutrition to a large extent, as the serious effects of sudden change should suggest. The importance of a simple diet in sickness is recognized, and it is just as true at all times that marked benefits are derived from simplifying the daily diet, as a means of conserving the energy expended in adaptation, and improving health and working capacity.

ESCAPE OF A PENNSYLVANIA JURY.

"Burglar stands as it is. Each party half the costs. Jury escaped." This is the entry in the docket of Justice of the Peace Thomas Allen of Mercer county after a suit over a horse trade. The jury retired and soon slip of paper was handed Justice Allen bearing the jury's verdict that the deal should stand and the costs be divided between the litigants. Declaring that no such verdict should be rendered in his court, the Justice went to the jury room. He found the windows up and saw the jurors scanning down the snow-covered hill.—Philadelphia Record.

Looking Down a Well.

I never draw a pail of water from the well without an appreciation of its charm such as a country-bred man, I imagine, could never feel. He might gaze at open plumbing, looking at it with his fresh country eye, where I should simply take it for granted; but I am afraid he never could fully experience what might be called the sentiment of a well, that delightful, inverted tower of darkness and dampness and coolth. If there isn't such a word as coolth, there ought to be.—Atkinson Kimball, in Atlantic.

Boarders in the World.

The people who live in houses, and sleep on beds, and walk on pavements, and buy their food from butchers and bakers and grocers, are not the most blessed inhabitants of this wide and various earth. The circumstances of their existence are too mathematical and secure for perfect contentment. They live at second, or third hand. They are boarders in the world. Everything is done for them by somebody else.—Henry Van Dyke.

Baldhead Club

One is Being Organized in a Western City.

Perhaps this report is a joke, but one thing is certain a baldhead is no joke to the man who wears it.

A club of baldheads formed in every city in America would be a good thing if its members could be induced to parade batless, through the main streets of the city.

The writer would suggest that some of the members carry banners with inscriptions of such a character as to warn those who still have hair, that baldness is unnecessary; that in nearly every case it is the result of carelessness.

Banners inscribed as follows would be appropriate:

"We let the dandruff germ do it."

"The time to save the hair is when you have half to save."

"When we were young, the dandruff germs worked every blessed minute. They dug our hair out by the roots, and now we aren't in it."

The best banner of all would be this:

"We didn't use Parisian Sage."

The People's Drug Co. sell Parisian Sage for 50 cents a large bottle, so live dandruff everywhere. It is guaranteed to stop falling hair, itching scalp and to destroy dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks, or money back.

CURING CATARRH.

Accept Our Advice and Try this Remedy at Our Risk.

Catarrh is disease of the mucous membrane. The mucous membrane is, one may say, the interior lining of the body. Catarrh therefore may exist in any part of the system.

When the catarrhal poison attacks the mucous membrane, inflammation and congestion are produced and nature fails to throw off the accumulated poisons. The organ which has been afflicted ceases to perform its proper function as nature intended it should.

The result is, complication upon complication, which may lead to other even more serious afflictions.

We honestly believe Roxall Mucil-Tone will do wonders toward overcoming catarrh. It is made from the prescription of an eminent physician who made a long study of catarrh, and his great success with this remedy was an enviable one.

We want you if you are a sufferer from catarrh in any form, to give Roxall Mucil-Tone a thorough trial. Use it with regularity, and persistency for a reasonable time, then if you are not satisfied, come back to you and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every cent you paid us. This is certainly the fairest offer that any one could make and should attest our sincerity of purpose. It comes in two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain it only at Absent But Not Forgotten.

"One morning when we were in some continental city," says Carl Harris, just back from a trip to Europe with former Mayor George W. Gardner, D. C. McIntyre and A. A. Schantz, "Commodore Gardner and I sat down for breakfast at a hotel where American newspapers were sold. We went out to the news stand and bought two copies of 'The Leader' and started to enjoy them while our mutton chops were on the fire."

"I wonder," said Commodore Gardner, as he opened his paper, "if we are quite forgotten back home."

"Intuitively, we both turned to the editorial page, and the very first story that fell under our eyes was an anecdote about the commodore himself."

"No," he said, "we are not forgotten, and there was a glisten in his merry, kindly eyes." —Cleveland Leader.

Berlin to Honor Austrian Emperor.
The city council of Berlin has decided to honor the emperor of Austria by giving his name to the square near the new opera house. The Kaiser Franz Josef Platz, as it will be called, is situated in Unter den Linden, and is surrounded by the palaces of William I and the Empress Frederick, the Frederick William university and the Royal Guards. The rebuilt opera house faces the square across Unter den Linden. The plaza is adorned with a marble memorial of the Empress Augusta and five statues of Prussian warriors.
